The real highlight of the annual Covered Bridge Festival in Mansfield, Indiana, is not at all a bridge at all. It's Potty Palooza. A € ¢ people walk from half a mile away, "says John Baker, a festival organizer. It is to be amazed: the bathroom from 27 rooms of Charmin, painted blue sky with white clouds and hooked at a 18-wheeled bed, inspires amazement wherever it goes. A «It is like a ride to the state fair, Â» The wonders of the bakers. A «Sometimes they are waiting in a row from 10 to 15 minutes! It is a showroom on wheels, a free trial for toilet paper. A «The media fracture, the costs increase," says John Brase, Charmin Brand Manager at Procter & Gamble. A «Nowadays it is difficult to reach consumers. A «Unless you have a large seed and trailer. Equipped with porcelain toilets, parquet floors, air conditioning and aromatherapy, skylights, changing rooms, a stall A «Little squirtsÂ» for children and an LCD screen in every room. From its debut in 2002, the truck Potty Palooza traveled For 11 months at the year, visiting 26 to 30 events from the Super Bowl at Arizona Balloon Festival. All in all, the 5 million guests each year pass through about 10,000 padded rolls. (A refueling truck joins the Potty Palooza caravan.) While waiting guests take part in full branding experience. The Charmin bear teaches the charmin dance while brand smiling representatives guide visitors to and from stalls and spruce the rooms after each use. At the Covered Bridge Festival, this can mean cleaning up after 5,000 guests a day. He says Alicia Haith, who directs the Palooza road team: "We can't move when that thing is full. We have to empty the black water 5-10 times a day. Is it worth it? Brase claims that the truck is part of one of the largest consumer sampling programs around the world. And while P & G doesn't talk about ROI, it's doing something right. After Potty Palooza did his first appearance at the Covered Bridge Festival in 2002, 30 000 people signed a petition to keep him alive.
