When you need to create an interesting and engaging presentation for your head, new customers or a job interview, you have a lot of options for tools to get the job. Also, even if it is the industry standard, you don't need your Microsoft PowerPoint and many people claim that there are only better tools for work anyway. This week we will see five of the best of those alternative presentation tools, based on your nominations. You definitely answered, some of you who are passionately notice that your favorite was better than PowerPoint anyway. We cannot highlight all the candidates, but here are the first five. Create a presentation or an interesting, informative and elegant presentation for a business meeting, for a company meeting (Mac: $ 19.99) Keynote of Apple can be purchased as a stand-alone product, or as part of the iWork productivity suite of Apple and is probably one of the most intuitive presentation applications, easy to use and heavy-heavy I've ever used. Many of you thought the same, and stressed that it is very easy to create good-looking presentations with Keynote without going out time by digging through the menus or looking for models that were not used to death from all the others. Keynote has excellent built-in graphic tools to edit and edit images entering presentations, easily support videos and movies on slides or as part of your presentation, it has no hokey animations, supports PowerPoint documents if you need spices of someone else's presentation, and also allows you to check your presentation from your iOS device or project the presentation via the video out and watch your notes and the next slides on your Mac.Google Docs display (Web: free) Google Docs presentation form for Be quite ruthless, but they recently updated it to make it more compatible with the people who come from Microsoft Office, or people who want a more robust presentation tool. Google Docs offers a wide range of models and presentation creation tools that are easy to skip and start, animations and slide transitions to make your presentation interesting to watch, and also the collaborative presentation that modifies with other people in your team. You could lose some heavier features like the built-in video your slides (although you can incorporate YouTube or other web videos), if you don't need bells and whistles of an application of a more constant application and just want a quick and free way to create good by looking at presentations on any system , this is it.google Docs has rolled up a new version of its presentation tool with over 50 new features, À € â,¬ | À € â,¬ | Read Morebeamer (latex) (Windows / Mac / Linux: free) if you are to latex fans, or simply remember to have it to apply it for your graduate graduate You will love the Beamer. Where other presentation tools offer you a GUI in which you drag yourself into elements you want to use as images and videos and then tweak text boxes to include the information you want on the screen, Beamer requires you to build your presentation in a markup language Custom that works virtually any latex document. If you are looking fast and easy to use, this is not true, but if you have already familiar with the latex and you used it in the past (it is extremely popular in academia and technical people who would prefer to write their presentations and modification Of any possible feature rather than giving control to a GUI), then it offers a granular level of control that other tools do not provide. Previous (Web / Win / Mac / Linux / iOS: Free, $ 59 / year "Enjoy," $ 159 / YR Pro) Prezi takes presentations in a different direction than static slides on a screen or a projector with text on them. Even the animations and transitions available in other pale presentation applications compared to the premiere unit "Zooming of the user interface", which moves entire slides and focuses strongly on images, graphics and movement to attract attention On the text. To some it is all too overwhelming and distracting from the main message of the presentation, and some have called the showed unprofessional presentation models, but many others noted that the tools of prezï make it easy to create presentations that are really interesting and a world Apart from the opaque slideshow we are all used to. You can create an account for free and start creating presentations on the web, up to a storage limit from 100 MB. If you need more space, $ 59 / year takes you a "Prezi Enjoy" account, 500 MB and the ability to make your presentations private and remove the Pressure watermark. $ 159 / year will take you a PRO account, which accompanies you up to 2 GB of storage and access to the Prezi desktop, an Adobe AIR app that allows you to work on your presentations outside of a browser.GreenOffice / OpenOffice.org Impression (Windows / Mac / Linux: free) without being too deep in the division between LibreOffice and OpenOffice.org, Impress is the presentation manufacturer for both the productivity suites. When LibreOffice scishes like a fork of OpenOffice.org, it has made us impress, and now both platforms essentially use the same tool for presentations and presentations. Both version support PowerPoint presentations and offer a user-friendly drag-and-drop user interface to build new presentations that you have familiar with if you have used one of the other tools listed here. In fact, stare mostly corresponds to PowerPoint in terms of user interface and layout of any of the tools here, but extends its DRAEWING and graphic functionality a little. Now that you've seen the first five, it's time to put them all to a vote and decide the winner. Mentions Mentions Mentions this week go to Sliderocket, which has entered with only a few timid nominations to create the first five, and the previously mentioned bunch.js.Bas. How to various PowerPoint ... Read your favorite does not receive enough nominations to create the top five? Have something to say about one of the contenders we've lost? Remixed image from Losevsky Pavel (Shutterstock). PowerPoint can be incredibly convincing when it was done well, but Through the scourge of very malignant presentations is too often lying, lying, sleep-inducent, antisis, infracsey, boring "not to mention completely ineffective. What makes this base so difficult to master? Ravi Mehta, CEO recently Launched Slidevana, he believes that it is a matter of understanding the format. [À € â,¬ "Undercoming a graphic designer, is generally used to thinking of words and prose. PowerPoint is a type of visual communication; A lot of people enter it without moving their perspective, and that's why they can end up with something watching Like a teleprinter, \[À € â,¬ "says to Co.Design. His company aims to take the conjectures for the creation of slides with a set of 150 models at 150 â,¬" \\[À € â,¬ "at the Toolbox Tool Complete \\\[€ â,¬ "which will be, in theory, helps users direct a more compelling vehicle to get their message. Mehta designed all the slides itself, but it's not a designer. * Instead, the experience of him has been derived from years in the technological industry, and giving that observing presentations in all their glory \\\\(or infamy\\\\). What about the design of the same slides? Well, they look like pretty standard problems. The key to Mehta is the ease of use. \\\\[À € â,¬ "we present prefabrose slides so that people can dive directly and start working to tell their story, \\\\\[À € â,¬" he says, stories that will appeal to emotions, with slides based on the image or on the image Quote, or reason, with centric diagrams. In a conscious choice to reduce the cluttered disorder, only two themes are offered: Dark, which adapts to the dramatic addresses of keynote in large, admitted, and the light, a better choice for more intimate print interviews or presenters. Inserting your content is done with easy dragging drag, and you can customize in a deck. Customers-time are able to access any new addition to the collection, and the service is offered for PowerPoint for both Windows and Mac, as well as Keynote. It would have been interesting to see what Mehta would have created in collaboration with a design professional to perfect the format, because there is certainly ample space for these PowerPoint presentations to improve their aesthetic charm. And ultimately, to achieve the type of professional transcendence involved in the name of Slidevana's company, you will really have to distil your mission statement. \\\\\\[À € â,¬ "The most important part of the presentation is the moral, \\\\\\\[À € â,¬ Mehta says, and no pie chart in the world will help you manufacture this. * Our advice: hiring a designer. Rapidly. Because © These things need a lot of work.
