Jessica chastain and bryce dallas

The star of the upcoming The Eyes of Tammy Faye film posted a TikTok on Wednesday that says, "When you spend 20yrs building a career and they still think you work at Jurassic Park," as she stares into space, and then lipsyncs along to a refrain of "I'm f-ing sick of it." The post itself is jokingly captioned, "This isn't the parent trap y'all." Chastain, who also has The 355 and HBO's Scenes From a Marriage coming up, revealed on NBC's The Tonight Show in 2015 that she was even being confused for Howard before she was famous, with a group of teens once approaching her to say "The Village was such a great movie." "I had this moment of do I tell them that they're wrong and it's not me, or do I pretend I'm Bryce. So I pretended I was Bryce," admitted Chastain. Howard herself is set to appear in Jurassic World: Dominion next year, so let Chastain's TikTok serve as a heads up of which actress to congratulate for fighting off all those dinosaurs. In a silly TikTok video shared on Wednesday, the two-time Oscar nominee reminded fans that she and Howard are two different people, mouthing along to words of the popular "Sick of It" trend created by KingDiaaa2. Fans in the comments hilariously joked with Chastain - known for roles in Molly's Game, Dark Phoenix and Zero Dark Thirty - that they loved her work in movies starring other famous ginger actress, like Emma Stone and Amy Adams. "Loved you as a blonde in Spider-Man 3," one commenter joked, while another added, "You were fantastic in Enchanted." Chastain, 44, and Howard, 40, have long been mistaken for one another. Ron Howard even once confused Chastain for his daughter while shopping an Apple store. The two stars acted in 2011's The Help together, and when they met for the first time, they couldn't help but compare features after years for being confused for one another. "The first time we met, we went to the table read and looked at each other, because we both get it all the time, and we grabbed each other's hands and said, 'Let's go to the mirror.' " Chastain recalled in a 2019 interview. "And we went to the mirror and looked at our faces and went, 'Yeah, we look exactly alike.'" "There are little things about us that are different, but we definitely look like kin," Chastain said, adding that she sees the comparison "as a compliment." "I think she's fabulous," she added of Howard. Keep up with the latest daily buzz with the BuzzFeed Daily newsletter! Sophie Turner & Jessica Chastain Play Strong Women in 'Dark Phoenix'"This isn't the Parent Trap, y'all." Jessica Chastain recently made a must-see TikTok about constantly being mistaken for Bryce Dallas Howard and the result is hilarious. The Zero Dark Thirty actress made a short video singing along to the popular TikTok song, "Sick of It." While mouthing the lyrics "I'm f—kin' sick of it," her caption read, "When you spend 20 years building a career and they still think you work at Jurassic Park." The funny caption is a nod to her eerie resemblance to actress Bryce Dallas Howard, who has starred in the Jurassic Park film installments, and coincidentally also co-starred with her in The Help. She also cleverly captioned the post, "This isn't the Parent Trap, y'all." The Interstellar actress also ended the video with a huge grin—proving that the clip is just a friendly reminder for us all. The uncanny look-alike comparison between the two is far from new. After a YouTube musical about the Jessica-Bryce comparison (only for Bryce to later post her own epic response video) went viral in 2015, the stars connected and agreed that they "need to use this power for good, and do a movie together playing sisters." And not only are audiences sometimes subject to the mix-up, but even family doesn't get it quite right. Even director Ron Howard once mistook Jessica for his own daughter, Bryce. @jes_chastain This isn't the parent trap y'all ? Sick Of It - KingDiaaa2 Jessica told AP in 2019 that the mishap took place at an Apple Store, sharing, "I was, like, walking by, I was like, 'Oh, that's Ron Howard.' And then my friend was with me [and] said he turned to someone, he goes, 'I think I just saw Bryce.' We look so much alike." Bryce later confirmed that the story was in fact, true in an interview with Entertainment Tonight, saying her dad was "shook. He really was.""At first he was like, 'You really look so much alike.' And I mean, obviously, I'm incredibly flattered, so it's great," she continued. "Although something is wrong when people stop mistaking me for her. I'll be like, 'Gotta get it together. I mean, but we do resemble one another. I love it."Watch Daily Pop weekdays at 11 a.m., only on E!. Jessica Chastain is reminding fans of her identity. In a new TikTok video, the 44-year-old actress poked fun at the fact that she's often mixed up for fellow actress Bryce Dallas Howard. In the clip, Chastain hilariously mouths along the words to the "Sick of It" trend created by KingDiaaa2. "When you spend 20 years building a career and they still think you work at Jurassic Park," Chastain wrote alongside her video, referencing Howard's role in the popular franchise, as she mouthed, "I'm fking sick of it. I'm fking sick of it. I'm fking sick of it. Ugh," while swinging her head back and forth."This isn't the parent trap y'all," she captioned the clip. @jes_chastainThis isn't the parent trap y'all♫ Sick Of It - KingDiaaa2Back in 2019, Chastain revealed that it's not just fans that mix her up with Howard, but herself, too."Before my career took off, I remember one time being on the subway and I was looking at a magazine and there was a picture of [Bryce], like a small picture, and I was like, 'What am I doing in this magazine?'" she told The Associated Press. "I actually had that thought." Parents aren't excluded from the confusion either, Chastain said, as she recounted a mix up with Howard's father, director Ron Howard, at the Apple Store. "I was walking by and I was like, 'That's Ron Howard.' Then my friend was with me [and] he said [Ron] turned to someone and said, 'I think I just saw Bryce,'" she said. "We look so much alike."ET caught up with Howard, 40, shortly thereafter, and she admitted that her dad had been "shook" after the mistaken encounter."He really was," she told ET. "At first he was like, 'You really look so much alike.' And I mean, obviously, I'm incredibly flattered, so it's great."Although something is wrong when people stop mistaking me for her.
