In this visual puzzle, artist based on Budapest Gergely Dud'f' (what comic messages about dudolf.com), the answer requires a bit of mathematics. The enigma asks him to determine how much an ice cream cone, a white-colored ice cream ball (called lettramps it vanilla), and a pink-colored ice cream ball- (Let't c s call strawberry) are It is worth it, according to the logic of the puzzle. Look at the equations for a time, then scroll to the answer. Prepare? He is sure? Okay, let's go through this. Three cones of ice cream multiplied together are equal to the number 27. Once three multiplied by 3 multiplied by three is equal to 27, each cone must be equal to 3. Passing to the next line, two ice cream cones A covered with a vanilla spoon ice cream added to match 10. So, since each cone is equal to 3, vanilla spoons should both equal 2. (in other words, 3 plus 3 plus 2 plus 2 is equal to 10.) Now a double spoon of vanilla in a cone, plus a single strawberry spoon in a cone is equal to 11. So if a dual spoon of vanilla is equal to 4 (2 + 2) and each Cone is equal to 3, the strawberry spoon must be equal to 1. (Since 4 plus 6 is equal to 10, plus 1 for the strawberry spoon is equal to 11.) And finally, a spoonful vanilla in a cone, beside an empty cone, beyond a double-spoon of strawberry and a single vanilla spoon in a cone, all together is equal to 15. A vanilla spoon on a cone © A 5 (2 + 3), and an empty cone is equal to 3. Two strawberry spoons, plus a vanilla spoon plus a cone can be calculate D as a plus 1 plus 2 plus 3 (coming out to 7). So together, a vanilla spoon (5) plus a cone (3) plus a triple spoon with two strawberries and a vanilla in a cone (7) is equal to 15. And, you have it. If frozen battling theme challenges are your thing, it also has a puzzle hidden image that challenges you to find lollipop in a field of ice cream cone.
