Exam Question: In many countries the proportion of older people is steadily increasing. What problems will this cause for individuals and society? Suggest some measures that could be taken to reduce the impact of ageing populations.

It is true that nowadays people in industrialised nations can expect to live longer than ever before. Although there will undoubtedly be some negative consequences to this trend, societies can take steps to mitigate these potential problems.

As people live longer and the populations of developed countries grow older, several related problems can be anticipated. The main issue is that there will obviously be more people of retirement age who will be eligible to receive a pension. The proportion of younger, working adults will be smaller, and governments will therefore receive less money in taxes in relation to the size of the population. In other words, an ageing population will mean a greater tax burden of working adults. Further pressures will include a rise in the demand for healthcare, and the fact young adults will increasingly have to look after their elderly relatives.

There are several actions that governments could take to solve the problems described above. Firstly, a simple solution would be to increase the retirement age for working adults, perhaps from 65 to 70. Nowadays, people of this age tend to be healthy enough to continue a productive working life. A second measure would be for governments to encourage immigration in order to increase the number of working adults who pay taxes. Finally, money from national budgets will need to be taken from other areas and spent for vital healthcare, accommodation and transport facilities for the rising numbers of senior citizens.

In conclusion, various measures can be taken to tackle the problems that are certain to arise as the populations of countries grow older.

Sample Essay Band 6

Discuss the role of women in society. Has the role of women changed compared to previous generations?

In many countries around the world women have faced lots of hardship, as they have been persecuted for their gender. This essay will discuss the role of women in society today and how it has changed compared with the previous generations.

Firstly, the role of women has changed and there are more equal opportunities for women to work, but in places like Saudi Arabia, certain places in Africa or Asia the role of women remains largely unchanged. The traditional role of the women is to stay at home, cook for her husband and look after the kids, as a homemaker. This is a

Secondly, the cost of living has risen - more education opportunies means that women can have top opportunties for jobs. This means they can also get jobs in good companies, but companies generally try to pay women less - this is the situation in some places, but this probably also depends on the role and specific company or

Thirdly, women have become their own managers and entrepreneurs - they have pushed through the gender barriers to start their own businesses - many of which are so successful - for example - the perfume company Jo Malone and British entrepreneur Michelle Malone, who is a billionaire through her lingerie empire.

In conclusion the role of women has changed compared to previous generations, but it still remains the same in some places. Nevertheless, there is hope for the future where women could have more equal opportunties an equal pay without gender Examiner's Comments: This piece is a band 6 due to the flow of structure, good usage and command of the English language. Furthermore, there are clear examples with valid and contextual points. However, there are spelling mistakes like opportunities and some other grammar issues. Overall, the essay is very short, so it lacks depth to increase the level up to a band 7.

IELTS Band 9 Sample Essay

Exam Question: One of the major problems that faces today's governments is creating enough satisfactory housing for their increasing populations whilst still trying to protect the environment.

Discuss both these views and give your opinion.

In a world with an ever-growing population, providing housing is one of the crucial tasks of all governments. At the same time, however, the environment has to be protected from too much destruction and deforestation. Different solutions have been created to solve these problems. One significant solution could be increasing the height of buildings.

When looking at the skyline of metropolitan cities, skyscrapers are becoming increasingly visible. The reason for this is simple: housing has to be provided, while the environment should suffer the least amount possible. Decreasing the building footprints of houses and therefore the destruction of environment, while increasing the height, is an effective solution in overcoming this dilemma. This resolution also has its faults though, as increasing height also means that sunlight reaching the streets will decrease and that housing will be built more densely in order to save space.

Another possible solution is to increase building costs to pressure the population into living in smaller areas, which would save space. As this impacts members of the community unevenly depending on their wealth, this would encourage unequal living standards and conflicts as a result of this. Therefore, this is not a plausible solution to the problem.

In my opinion, finding the perfect way to minimize environmental damage while increasing housing is a problem to which there is no simple solution. Many governments are currently relying on height to solve the problem, but this is not attractive to many people. Any solution chosen should be one that causes the fewest problems.
