The Electronic Frontier Foundation (EFF) acted as the fiscal sponsor of the Tor project in its early years, and the first financial backers of the TOR project included the United States International Bureau of Broadcasting, Internews, Human Rights Watch, the University of Cambridge, Google and the Netherlands-based Stichting NLNET. [5] [6] [7] [8] [9] [10] In October 2014, the TOR project hired the public relations firm Thomson Communications to improve its public image (particularly regarding the terms "dark networks" and "hidden services") and to educate journalists on the technical aspects of the Tor. [11] In May 2015, the TOR project terminated the Tor Cloud service. [12] [13] In December 2015, Project Tor announced that it had hired Shari Steele, former Executive Director of the Electronic Frontier Foundation, as its new Executive Director.
