From AFP-Agence France Presse 19 March 2021 order reprints Print article Lionel Bonaventure Instagram says that he is exploring the launch of a version of the image-centric social network for the minors of 13 years, with parents' control. The news from Instagram, which confirmed a Buzzfeed report news, is in the midst of concerns about the difficulties in keeping children minor out the dangerous world of social media. Adam Mosseri, who directs the property's Facebook service, said on Twitter: "Children are more and more ask their parents if they can join the applications that help them keep up with their friends," he said. He added that "a version of Instagram in which parents have control, as we did with messenger children, is something we are exploring". The worries shot back to the Twitter exchange including worries for bullying or inappropriate content, reasoning that social networks are constantly fighting this type of abuse. "We don't limit ourselves to giving stuff for children because they want it," reads a tweeted response to mosses from 'a mother.' "We don't give children dangerous tools with which to play when adults havenà ¢ T understood how to make these security tools." Facebook Instagram Property, like his mother company, allows only those of superior age 13 to join, but to verify the internet age makes it difficult for the capture of all transgressors. Instagram, which has more than one billion users, this week has presented the technology aimed at preventing minor children to create accounts and blocking adults to contact young users who do not know. It was the last move to respond to concerns about inadequate contact between adults and children on the platform, which as most services sets a minimum age of 13 Instagram will begin with artificial intelligence to determine the ages of a user to Registration in an effort to find minor users. "While many people are honest on their age, we know that young people can lie on their date of birth", a blog post this week said. Furthermore, the Californian colossus said he would introduce a new feature that prevents to send messages to children under 18 that do not follow them, to avoid unwanted contacts. Instagram is also looking for ways to make it difficult for adults who have exposed the "potentially suspicious behaviors" to interact with adolescents, including limiting these adults to see suggested adolescent accounts.
